U of L aiming for a quick start win could give us a lot of confidence and keep from putting added pressure on ourselves."

U of L upset Tulane 23-12 last year in the Louisiana Superdome and will again be an underdog tonight. The Green Wave is favored by a touchdown, which is the way Schnellenberger likes it. Nor is he surprised.

"Not at all," he said. "The name Tulane conjures up more tradition in football than Louisville does.

"But people who set the odds have no idea about what these kids have done since last year. Besides, predicting what's going to happen in an opener means about as much as trying to predict the sex of a baby without using modern technology."

Tulane returns eight offensive starters who powered the Green Wave into the top 20 in total offense, plus seven defensive regulars.

They include quarterback Terrence Jones and wide receiver Marc Zeno, who between them own 16 school records. Jones, who accounted for 2,671 yards total offense last season, played only a quarter against U of L before departing with a bruised elbow. Zeno caught six passes for 107 yards, but Tulane's only scoring came on four field goals.

"We had as much trouble moving the ball against Louisville as we did anybody we played," Tulane coach Mack Brown said.

Louisville was without quarterback Jay Gruden, who had undergone knee surgery two weeks earlier. Tonight will mark Gruden's first game appearance since Oct. 25, but he's not the only quarterback likely to see action for U of L.
